

Perfectly Personal Word Art Customization Rules

© 2019 Jenifer Juris

TOU

In this lesson we will cover some rules for customizing our paper strip templates.

Rules:

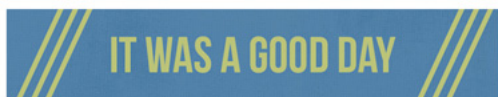

1. Use solid or plain papers for the main portion of the paper strips.

The point of these paper strip templates is to add our own custom words to them. If you clipped a patterned paper to the main portion of the paper strip template, your custom words would be very hard to read. So, always use a solid paper for the main portion of your paper strip template.

2. Only use patterned papers for the decorative accents that are big enough to see the pattern. What do I mean by this? Let me explain.

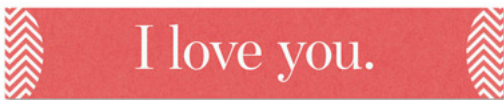

Let's look at two of our paper strip templates we created. Here's a template where we have stripes. The amount of area the three stripes on each side take up is very small due to the stripes being thin in nature.

Clipping a patterned paper to the stripes shows us very little of the pattern on the paper. Because of this, our eyes are confused by the stripes and this hurts our paper strip design.

Here's the paper strip where we have half circles. The area taken up by the half circle accents is much bigger than the stripes from the previous example. Because of this, it's ok to use a pattern here. Just make sure the pattern isn't too large for the space.

3. When using two or more solid papers, use contrasting colors.

Here are two paper strip templates that required use of more than one solid paper. In each case, the paper strip was customized to use colors that are highly contrasting. The reason this is important is readability.

Readability

Readability is a topic I covered in my Secrets of Terrific Type class but let me do a quick review about contrast.

If we are making these custom paper strips so we can use our own sentiments on our scrapbook layouts, then it's safe to assume we want our paper strips to be easily read.

So, here's an example of a paper strip with high contrast,

And here's an example with low contrast.

It's very obvious that the high contrast is much more easily read. So, keep this in mind when choosing from your kit's colors.

4. Use easy to read fonts.

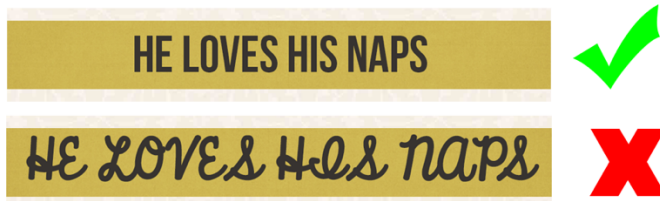

If you're going through the trouble to create a custom paper strip, then, once again, make sure it's easy to read. Thin, hard to read script fonts are not good here. Make sure whatever fonts you use are easy to read, or bold enough that they are easy enough to make out when on a paper strip.

5. How you Customize the Type is Important

Besides using easy to read fonts, when it comes to customizing the type of your word art, please keep the following simple rules in mind:

- Never use all caps when using a script font.
- But, using all caps when using a basic font is a good idea.

- Never add a layer style to your type. This is not the place to add a drop shadow or embossing to your type. That would not make for a realistic looking paper strip.

6. Be Mindful About the Number of Words You Use

If you're creating a short paper strip, 1-3 words is all you should use. If you try to squeeze more than that one there, the font size will be so small you won't be able to easily read it.

On the flip side, if you have a long paper strip and only use one short word, this can also look awkward. So make sure the phrases you use fit well for the length of the paper strip.

I recommend using anywhere from 1-5 words depending on the length or size of your word art. This means that you should use phrases and not necessarily sentences. Use of punctuation is not usually something you see on word art but there are always occasions where an exception can be made, especially with the exclamation point and the question mark.

7. Layer Styles Are Almost Always a NO

I know it might be tempting, especially for new digital scrapbookers, to think about adding layer styles like embossing to the word art templates. In this entire class, there is only ONE piece of word art where I added a drop shadow to an accent when I customized it. NONE of the other word art templates need any layer styles added to the accents or the type. I created these paper piece word art templates to look like real paper pieces and so embossing or adding drop shadows to the decorative accents we are adding to the templates is not necessary.

The rules you learn in this lesson are rules that will remain important throughout this class. I will have you refer back to this list so it might be a good idea to print off this manual and have it handy as you make your way through the class. Following these simple rules will help you customize your paper strip templates. Your paper strips will look professionally designed as well as be easy to read.

Credits:

Papers Used from the following kits: Time Teller by Etc By Danyale, Big Idea by One Little Bird, New Years Celebration by Just Jaimee, Memory Keeper by Kim B Designs, Christmas Lights by Julie Billingsly, Mother is a Verb by Krystal Hartley, and Stories 365 by Kristin Cronin-Barrow