

A few thoughts before we begin our first practice: and some things to help you make the most of your time within this sacred container.

- 1. I don't expect that you'll be able to digest everything transmitted here in seven weeks. And that's okay. This container will be available for you to return to over time. Embodying our priestess calling and sovereignty is a lifetime's work, and often the vessel fills by slow drip, rather than a flowing tap, because the Divine knows this is what we can handle safely. Take in what you can now and return as needed.
- 2. Your birth tradition has something powerful to offer, and I invite you to be open to the "gold" even as you allow the "dross" to burn away. Whether you were born Jewish, Catholic, Evangelical, Mormon or something else, you received a gift that was priceless and messy, full of joy and pain. Transmuting the trauma into power is the work we're undertaking. Consider holding this process sacred, even when it hurts.
- 3. Questioning is welcome, and if you want additional resources for anything I say... please ask. Too often mystical teachers and priestess guides have asked us just to "accept things" the they say because they had a dream or a download. While these are valid methods of feminine revelation ... I also uphold the value of masculine revelation through text, study, and analysis.

- 4. Finally, everything said and done in here will be kept in confidence. I ask that you honor this with other participants' stories. Any questions you don't want to share here or in the FB group can be shared via email at hello@templeofdivineradiance.com.

Tent Keepers
from Temple of Divine Radiance

