

Beginning Basic Education (2.8) Nonfiction

Teacher meetings with parents are very important. Some people fear them. Some teachers think they are hard, too. Sometimes a child is having a problem. The teacher has to say that in a way that the child does not get upset. The meeting with your child's teacher is at the school. The goal is for you and the teacher to get to know each other. It is good for the child if the parent and teacher work together. You both want the same thing. You want the best for your child. The two of you can be pleased if the child is doing well. You could also listen and see if there are any problems. You and the teacher can work together to help your child. Going to the meeting shows you are interested. It shows your child you think school is important. It also shows you think your child is important.

Excerpt from WWW.THINK60.NET: Online Curriculum for Adults. Reprinted with permission.