

Directions: Correct the sentences below by replacing commas with semicolons where needed.

Chapter 2:

1. A moment was allowed for the first thrill to subside, then Hugo, the villain, stalked in with a clanking sword at his side, a slouched hat, black beard, mysterious cloak, and the boots.

Chapter 4:

1. "I don't understand what it's all about, go back and begin it, child."
2. "Susie Perkins came to school today with a lovely red carnelian ring, I wanted it dreadfully, and wished I was her with all my might.
3. "I like that kind of sermon, it's the sort father used to tell us," said Beth thoughtfully, putting the needles straight on Jo's cushion.

Chapter 5:

1. Meg wanted me to bring some of her blanc-mange, she makes it very nice, and Beth thought her cats would be comforting.
2. "She's right, the lad is lonely."
3. "How stupid you are child, he meant you, of course."