

You are one of the class teachers of Grade 6 in a school.

There is a new student, Sarthak, who has joined your class after having moved schools as the child's family had relocated from Jharkhand.

You notice that Sarthak is unusually quiet and often misses his online classes. He is not as participative and often refuses to switch on the camera. Whenever he does, he appears to be lost in his own thoughts. You are concerned by his behaviour and decide to talk to his parents upon which you get to know that Sarthak was a cheerful, happy boy, very enthusiastic about studies and dance. Even his parents are concerned about the change in his behaviour and mood.

You decide to initiate a conversation with Sarthak and come to know that he is being bullied by his new classmates. He is terribly missing his old home, school and friends.
