Introduction to Creative Writing

If you have a need to tell stories through your writing, whether they be in the form of novels, screenwriting, short stories, playwriting, poetry, or creative non-fiction, then this course is for you. It doesn't matter if you're just starting out in the field or have been at it for years – everyone's skills can benefit from learning the basics of creative writing. This course will teach you the essential elements of creative writing, provide you with terms and devices specific to the field, and give you many examples and ideas that you can use to create your own work. You can also apply many of the ideas provided within this course towards your business and article writing.

To receive the most out of this course, I suggest you follow the lessons closely and use them within your own work often. Doing so will supply you with the direction and inspiration you need to create your own writing. You can also use this course in conjunction with any creative writing workshop to further enhance your skills. Thank you for your contribution to the arts and I look forward to reading your masterpiece someday soon.

Cheers,

Natasha Ganes

Cofounder, TreeHouse Arts