

Here's a quick, hopefully fun and fairly simple mix-and-match activity to see how much you know.

Below, you will see three definitions: of poetry, prose and drama. Decide which is which and select the correct option for each and check your answers at the bottom of the page:

| Definition |  | Type                         |                             |                             |
|------------|--|------------------------------|-----------------------------|-----------------------------|
| a.         | This includes plays, such as An Inspector Calls and Shakespeare. The form of this is a script with stage directions. | <input type="radio"/> Poetry | <input type="radio"/> Prose | <input type="radio"/> Drama |

| b.         | This tends to be a shorter text and can be written in different ways – for example, in rhyming couplets, or as a sonnet. Word choice is more selective. | <input type="radio"/> Poetry | <input type="radio"/> Prose | <input type="radio"/> Drama |
| c.         | This includes texts such as novels and short stories – there is a clear sense of character and plot, and often setting, too.                            | <input type="radio"/> Poetry | <input type="radio"/> Prose | <input type="radio"/> Drama |

Answer below (no peaking until you've answered the above)

a. Drama. b. Poetry. c. Prose
