

The diagrams below show the stages and equipment used in the cement-making process, and how cement is used to produce concrete for building purposes. Summarise the information by selecting and reporting the main features, and make comparisons where relevant.

Write at least 150 words.

This diagram depicts the mechanism, equipment, and steps used for producing cement, which is used to manufacture concrete for construction purposes. It is clear from the graph that the procedure undergoes seven stages for getting the usable concrete.

According to what is shown, first of all, clay and limestone get crushed and turned into powder, before going to the mixer, when the two items' powder get blended. After that, the mixture is subjected to the heat in the rotating heater. As soon as the mixture is grinded, it is then packaged into bags and subsequently, the product will be ready to use in the next process.

Moving to the concrete production process, we could easily notice that a mix of gravel, sand, cement, and water will have to be mixed up together using the concrete mixer.

To sum up, we could say that clay and limestone are the main two components used to produce cement, which in turn, will be used with three other ingredients in the concrete production.
