

Annette: Cancer-Free for Five Years and Counting

So in June of this year, I was kind of cleared by the BC Cancer Agency as being cancer-free! So it was five years ago in June that I had my last PET scan that came back no evidence of disease. I had had a blood test through CTOAM the October previous to that. That said I was all clear. But my brain didn't quite comprehend that I was actually still all clear at that point. I was still in treatment. I was still in active treatment when that came through and I know, Alex tested it twice because he didn't quite believe- actually there was no evidence of disease at that point in my treatment process. But second test came back as no evidence of disease either. I've had no treatment now for five and a half years. So really I'm fine. It should be fine.
