

Understanding Investing for the Long Run

TRANSCRIPT

Camilo Maldonado: In this course, you will learn how to use common sense investing principles to invest for the long run by focusing on diversified low-cost index funds.

More specifically, by the end of this course, you will understand your motivation for wanting to invest, the power of investing, and what it is that's been holding you back from investing in the first place.

You'll also learn if you're ready to invest from a financial perspective, because not everyone can start investing right away.

And finally, you'll understand your investment options, how to get your fair share of market returns, and the different types of accounts you can use to start investing.

These are all of the things that I had to learn the hard way. But when you break it down one at a time, you'll see that investing doesn't need to be that complicated. And you also don't need to make the same mistakes that I made.

If you've already made some mistakes of your own, that's okay. We are here to learn and grow. And part of that is letting go of our past so that we can move forward. Today is a new beginning.

A new you.
