Born an extrovert with a happy-go-lucky personality, a Type 3 is sporty and prefers a vigorous lifestyle. He or she can usually deliver whatever he or she promises. Characterised by positive emotions he or she is also marked by a sense of urgency and a tendency to seek out stimulation in the company of other people.

Such a person actively desires a pronounced engagement with the external world, and naturally enjoys being with others.

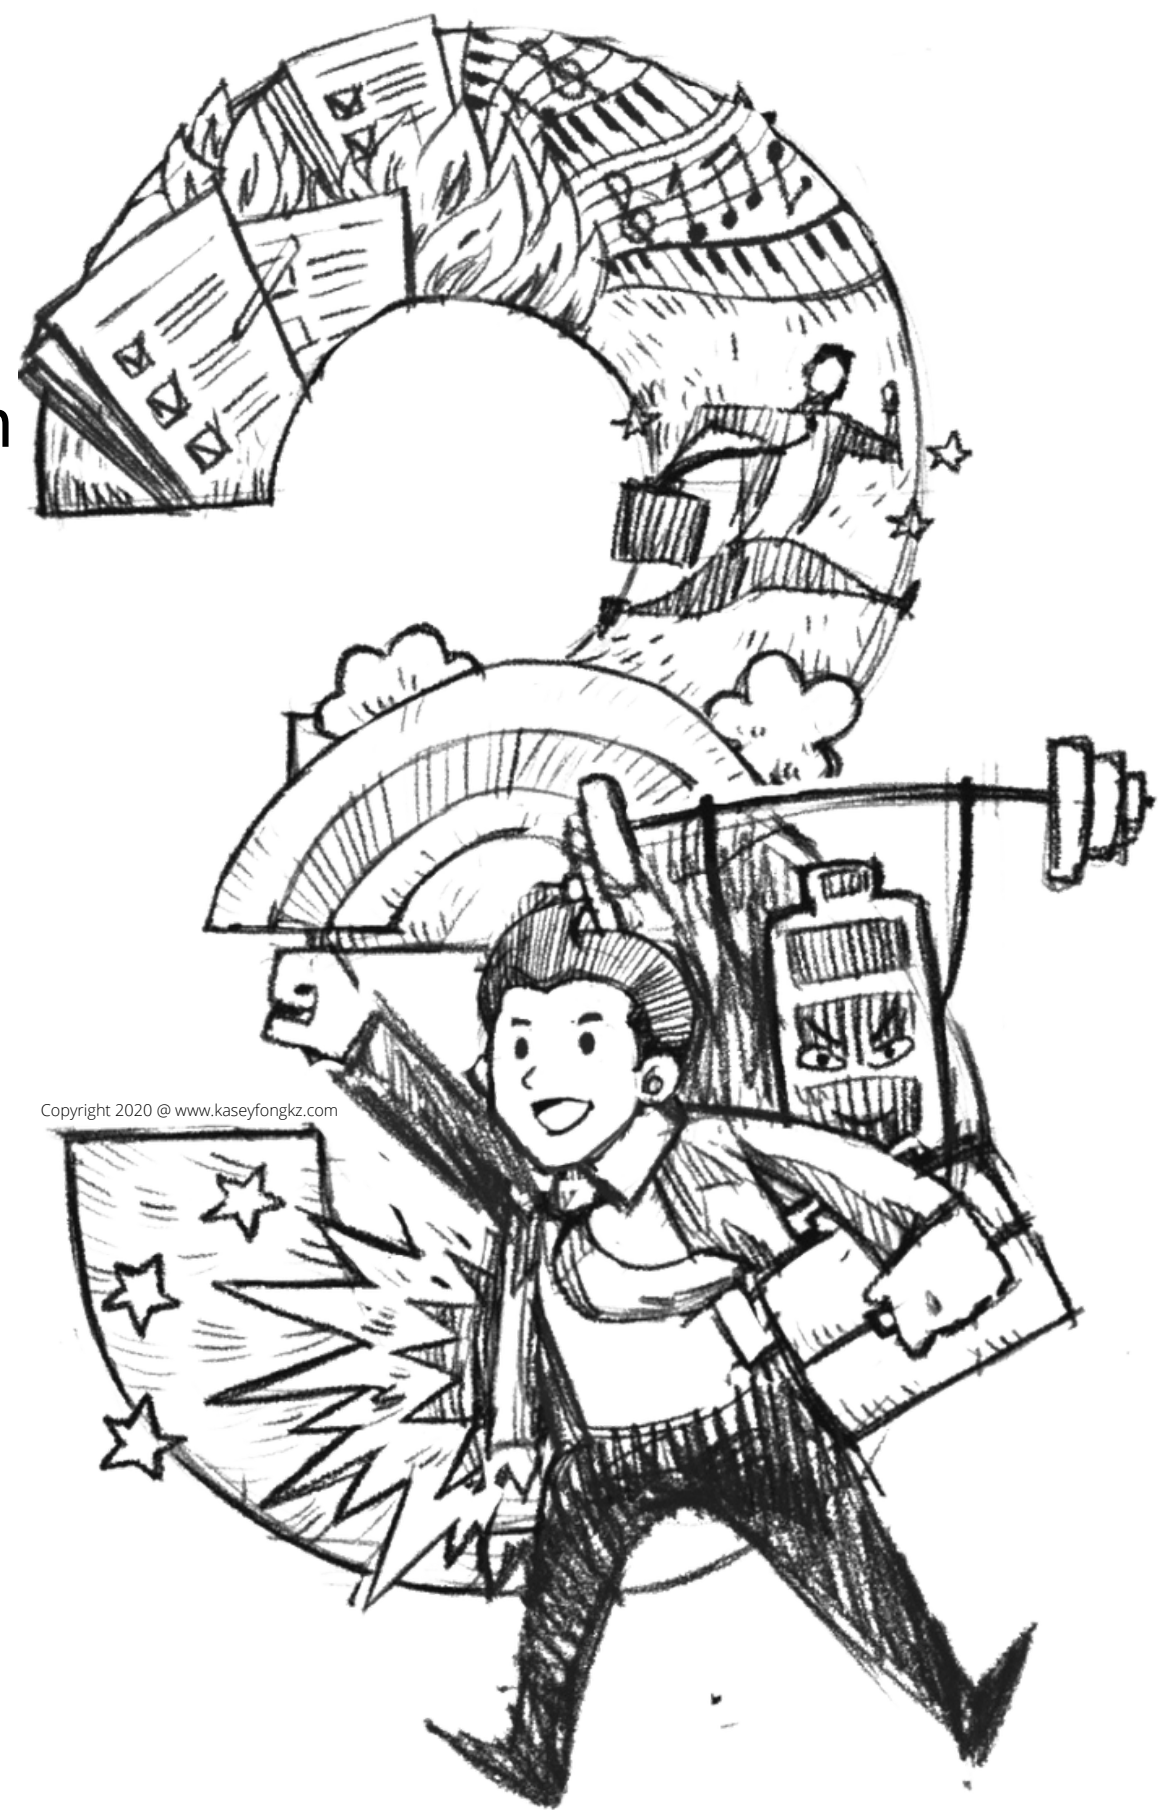

Type 3s are forward-looking and focused and they know exactly what they want out of life. Their action-orientated personalities show up in high levels of energy and enthusiasm, and they frequently portray a "Yes!" or "Let's go!" attitude when presented with opportunities for excitement. Sociable, one that exudes unrestrained confidence and naturally talkative, Type 3s tend to focus on or enjoy organising or mobilising people.

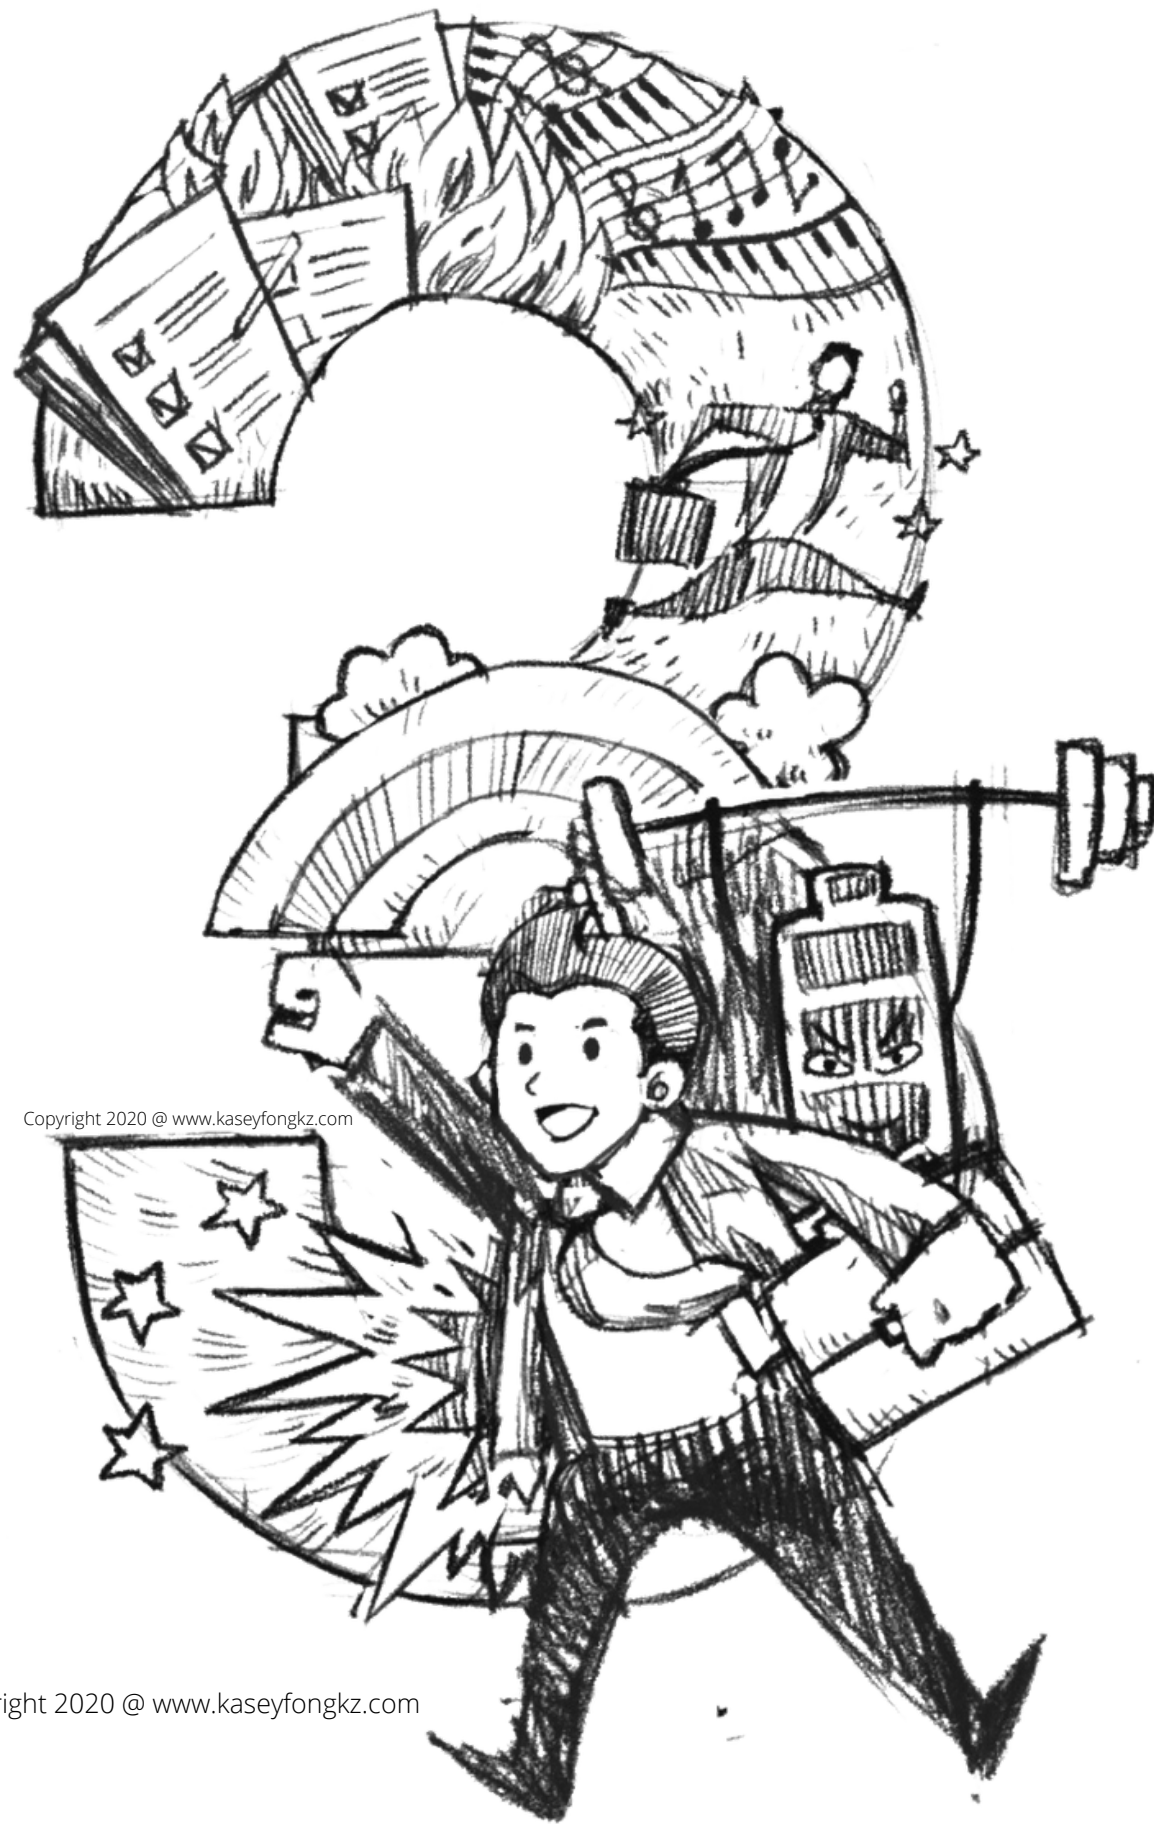

They are also assertive and vibrant, qualities which tend to draw attention towards them and remain in the limelight.

Life tends to be good to Type 3s and they are often rich and prosperous, although they are also likely to face a number of adversities in life.

Interestingly, though they are talented at moving others along their own theories and tactically-planned agendas. They are actually content to enforce regulation and practices inherited from traditions handed down to them from higher authority

On the romance front, Type 3 individuals tend to be very loyal and ardent lovers.

A person with a Type 3 personality has a tendency to be aggressive and possesses a rushed temperament. Impatient with slow thinkers and contemplatives, this shortcoming poses working relationships that result in frustrations.

At times mischievous, a Type 3 may also tend to take things lightly and may not be firm in making or keeping decisions or taking actions. Adding to his or her bluntness of speech, this can cause relationships to "roller coaster" through many ups and downs. If not handled well, this may lead to disastrous results.

Unpredictability and emotional volatility do not help.

A Type 3's sensitivity may result in him or her retreating into a shell of morose silence for long periods when hurt. Unfortunately he or she also tends to attract demanding partners, especially in relationships, and balance is hard to find or maintain..

The joys of life, which is a good thing, may at times be overly emphasised by Type 3s, who end up becoming frivolous and superficial. They may then end up scattering their abilities and having little sense of purpose in life.

Type 3 individuals may also tend to be overweight later in life, and are likely to suffer from digestive issues and heart problems.

Individuals who are Type 3 have a tendency to marry young, usually below 28 years of age. They are also likely to be very good looking in their younger days. About 80 percent of them love eating meat and fried food.
