

Perfectly Personal Word Art Circle Homework Part 2 – Transcript

It's time for part two of the circle homework. This is where we get to have fun working with the templates we just created. For part two of the homework, we're going to practice customizing our circle templates and then we're going to use those customized templates in a project. Also, the project can be anything. We can make a card, a scrapbook page or anything else you wish.

Here are some guidelines for this section of the homework. Number one, use at least two of the circle templates we created. Number two, use any of the circle templates you wish. And number three, revisit the customization rules video found in the paper strip section of this class. Those customization rules are the exact same for circles as they are for paper strips.

Here are the two circle templates I chose to customize. I used similar colors on both and I really like how they compliment each other without being too matchy-matchy. Here's the scrapbook page I made with these customized circles. I used both of the circles to draw my eye to important things. The first one I placed right next to the main event of the page, the photo. The second one I placed at the top of the page, which helps draw the eye up to see the journaling. Now that you've seen what I've done, it's your turn to create something fun with your circle word art. I hope you take time to enjoy the creative process. This is the whole reason we're doing this class, making templates that allow you to tell your own specific story. Next up, we're going to do part three of the homework. I'll see you there. This is Jenifer Juris with perfectly personal word art.
