“Stuff About Guitars” Syllabus

Course Description:

Everything you never needed to know about the history, science, and culture of the guitar. This course includes interviews and a shop tour with world class guitar builder, Preston Thompson. Ray drops nuggets and treasures along the way and also invites some pretty incredible players in for a chat.

Required Materials:

- Journal
- Internet connection capable of supporting streaming video

Expected Time Commitment:

- 1 hour per lesson

What to Expect:

A typical lesson will consist of a pre-recorded video teaching. The course has a companion study guide with descriptions of each lesson to help you along.

School Policies:

We are committed to cultivating a culture that celebrates originality and individual expression in worship. Offering online courses allows us to increase our impact exponentially beyond what we can offer in a weekend conference or other public event. However, in an online-only setting we are unable to offer pastoral counsel to students. The best place to receive this kind of care is within the context of a local church body.

Our hope is that many of you will connect deeply with the material offered in this course, and we realize that a natural outcome of deep connection is the desire to share that connection with others. We respectfully request that you keep in mind the significant investment of time and resources we have put into making this material available, and that your honor both our investment and your own by not sharing your login credentials or specific course materials without permission of the instructor.
