Not All DNA Tests Are the Same

We did send our, my tumor to go get genetically tested through CTOAM . They found that it was the B RAF positive. So it was opposite of what the Cancer Agency had found, which was interesting. We just kept that information to ourselves. We actually, to this day have not told my oncologist that their testing is wrong because I just don't want to know. I don't want to go-- I would never-- I'm sure they have good trials or whatever, but I think I would now at this point trust Alex to get me through some kind of trial or some sort of thing like that. I don't really need to know what their path might be at this point because I'm not sure that I would necessarily follow it anyways.
