"All About Wolves"

Wolves are wild dogs. They can be found in different places all over the world. They live and hunt together in groups called packs. There can be 2 wolves in a pack, or all the way up to 20 wolves. They work very well together and are great hunters. When wolf pups are born they cannot see or hear. It takes them about 8 months to get big enough to help the pack.

Wolves have two layers of fur. The layers help them stay warm when the winters are very cold. Wolves can run really fast for a long time. Even though wolves are wild and dangerous, they are very smart.

Word Work Color the words in the passage that match each category below:

-  Words that are Plural
-  Words with the /in/ pattern

"Food Chains"

A food chain shows the feeding relationship between all living things in a particular habitat. Food chains usually begin with plants, because they make their own food. Living things that make their own food can be called producers. They do not need to hunt or search for food because they make it themselves, with the help of the Sun. Consumers are animals that do not make their own food, but need to hunt or search for the food their bodies require. In the food chain, the first animal that eats the producer, or the plant, is called the primary consumer. The animal that eats the primary consumer is called the secondary consumer. The animal that eats the secondary consumer is called a third order consumer. The chain continues as the next animal is the fourth, fifth, sixth, and so on. The food chain can be thought of as a transfer of energy. All living things need energy to survive. Within a food chain, some living things create the energy (producers), while others use the energy (consumers). Here is an example of a food chain. A plant produces energy and is then eaten by an insect. The insect is eaten by a bird. The bird is eaten by a large mammal. The mammal eventually dies and decomposes. It is broken down and enriches the soil for plants to produce more energy. So the food chain is a full circle of life that is necessary for a habitat to thrive. If just one part of the food chain fails, the entire structure can fall apart. Humans are at the top of the food chain, eating both plants and animals to gain energy. Each part of the food chain is important for all living things.

So when he entered his new classroom he wasn't too worried about finding friends fast. Everyone seemed nice enough, and his teacher Mr. Jones seemed fun. As the class settled in for the morning, Ben answered the usual questions from his classmates about where he was from. All the kids seemed intrigued about his story, except for one boy. His name card said Jake and he glared at Ben. Ben wasn't sure why Jake seemed to instantly hate him and he tried to shrug off the stares. But, at recess Jake came over to Ben and started pushing him around, accusing Ben of thinking he was better than everyone. Then at lunch Jake shoved all of Ben's food on the ground and laughed in his face. Ben didn't know what to do. He had never been bullied before. "Tightrope walking"

Jacob didn't know what tightrope walking or high-wire tricks were until his teacher read a book about it. He just couldn't picture someone walking on a rope. It seemed so dangerous and impossible. But after learning about what Philippe Petit did in 1974, Jacob was hooked! In the book, Philippe Petit dreamed of securing his tightrope between two skyscrapers that used to be the tallest buildings in New York City. At the time, The World Trade Center Twin Towers were almost finished being built. One night, Philippe and some friends pretended to be construction workers and snuck into the buildings. They had to walk a quarter mile up the stairs to the very top of both buildings. Once up top, they secured the tightrope to one building and threw the other end of the rope to friends waiting atop the other building. By morning, the tightrope was ready. Philippe walked out between the towers. The cars below looked like ants. He started doing high-wire tricks when someone on the sidewalks below spotted him. Soon, the police arrived. But no one could go out on the rope to bring Philippe to jail. Eventually, Philippe decided he would walk back and accept his fate. A judge ordered him to perform in the city for free. "Standing up For Sammy"

Sammy was teased every day since kindergarten. So when he started his fifth grade year he braced himself for more teasing. The other kids didn't seem to understand that Sammy was special and that he was a really amazing friend. None of the kids ever bothered to talk with Sammy. They just made fun of him because he talked different; he walked strange; and he was always smiling. Sammy pretended that it didn't bother him what the other kids thought of him. He tried to tell himself that their opinions of him didn't matter. But deep down inside, Sammy felt a deep sadness because he knew no one wanted to be his friend. Sammy was not surprised when the boys started teasing him as soon as he neared the door to his new classroom. What did surprise Sammy was a strange new boy's voice from behind, defending Sammy. "Leave him alone! Why are you even teasing him? He seems like a nice guy to me," the voice yelled. All the boys, including Sammy, whirled around and stared at the new boy. Their mouths were all hanging open in shock. "My name is Charlie," the new kid said, "and if you mess with this guy anymore, it means you're messing with me too." He then put his arm around Sammy and strutted into the classroom. Even though no one knew who Charlie was, he walked confidently into the room like he was the teacher. He sat right next to Sammy. He ate lunch with him and played at recess with him. By the end of the first week of fifth grade everyone was really getting to know Sammy, and Charlie. Our Saturday morning began like any other ordinary weekend morning. My mom was busy running my sister and I to soccer games and dance practice. But the day got very interesting when my mom stopped the car to get the mail. There was a huge package waiting at the mailbox. "Is that for me?" I screamed. My grandparents live on the other side of the country, and they send us packages all the time. I love getting them in the mail! "No, it's for me Kate," my mom said, surprised. We rushed her inside and waited impatiently for her to open it. "Rip it open mom!" my sister and I both screeched at the same time. My mom carefully opened the package. On the very top was a handwritten letter addressed to Debbie Soyer. Soyer is my mom's maiden name, so I knew it must be from someone in her past. My mom read the letter in silence, putting her hand on her chest and gasping in surprised shock. "Who is it from?" we begged her to tell us. My mom explained that her fifth grade teacher had the class bring in items that were important to them at the time. She promised to mail them in a time capsule 20 years later if she could find where they were living. I thought it was remarkable that my mom's teacher saved all this stuff from 20 years ago! My mom's time capsule included a nasty pack of gum, a picture of her with a really bad perm, some creepy little doll, and an old book. My mom told us stories as she pulled each piece out of the box. I don't think I've ever seen her that happy. I'm going to school on Monday and asking my teacher if she'll make us times capsules in 20 years too!

"TIPS FOR FLUENCY"

The following are tips for administering and scoring the fluency portion of the intervention program

Tip #1: If a student gets stuck on a word, wait 3 seconds and then tell the student the word. Circle the word as an error. This will also impact the student's Rate and Tone score.

Tip #2: If a student repeats a word, it is not an error. But it will likely affect the student's Rate and Tone score.

Tip #3: If a student reads a word incorrectly, it counts as an error. Circle the word. This will impact both the Rate and Tone score and likely some comprehension.

Tip #4: If a student adds a word that is not part of the passage, write the word in and count that as an error. ✓

Tip #5: If a student reads a word incorrectly and then goes back to fix the word, it does not count as an error. It is called a self-correction. Put a SC next to the word. SC are great because it tells us that the student recognized the original word did not fit and it needed to be fixed to have the text make sense.

Tip #6: Time the student and document how long he/she takes to read the passage each time. Don't be afraid to show the student the results. This is a great opportunity for a lesson on how rereading can improve our fluency!

Tip #7: For scoring the Rate and Tone, consider the flow of the reading by asking yourself the following questions;

1. Did the reader repeat a lot of words or phrases?
2. Did the reader pause at commas and stop at periods?
3. Were there many unnatural pauses and breaks?
4. Did the reader read too fast? Too slow?
