

HOW TO BE A CHANGE CATALYST

PART 3 // Full Transcript

- Introduce Lee Strobel, an American author, former investigative journalist, and previous atheist whose life changed after his wife decided to follow Jesus.
- Discuss Strobel's transformation from an atheist to an international Christian speaker and author, emphasizing the power of personal invitation to church.
- Introduce "How To Be a Change Catalyst," a four-part series aiming to guide on how to invest in relationships and invite people to church.
- Highlight the importance of personal invitations to church.
- John Chapter 1, Verses 35-51
- Read and explain the scripture from John 1:35-51, emphasizing the spread of Jesus's message through personal interactions and invitations.
- Discuss the power and simplicity of the phrase, "Come and see," which is central to inviting people to church.
- Encourage viewers to personally invite someone to church, discussing various ways to make the invitation appealing (e.g., discussing upcoming events, messages, or children's activities).
- Provide resources for inviting people to church, such as cards, website information, or social media posts.
- Stress the role of the inviter as a "bringer," someone who actively brings people to church rather than passively inviting.
- Share a personal story about die-cast cars and how the bus, with its multiple seats, represents inviting others to join our faith journey.
- Emphasize the concept of a "faith journey bus" - the idea of asking people to join us in our journey with God, not just attend a single service.
- Challenge the viewers to pray for an opportunity to invite one of four people they've been considering to church this week.
- Highlight the importance of taking the initiative to invite, regardless of the outcome, as the responsibility lies in investing in relationships and inviting others.
- Remind viewers to focus on inviting just one person as part of their role as a change catalyst.
- Conclude the session by expressing gratitude for their participation in the challenge and excitement to hear about their experiences inviting others to church.
