Saving Search Presets & Job Posts

To access the advanced search with filters, click on the magnifying glass and then click the button labeled 'Filters'. From here, you can choose the specific filters that make sense for you.

The screenshot shows the advanced search filters interface. At the top, there are tabs for 'SEARCH' and 'SAVED JOBS'. Below this is a search bar containing 'Web Development' with a magnifying glass icon, a toggle for 'U.S. only', and a 'Filters' button. To the right of the search bar is a 'Save search' button. Below the search bar, it indicates '4,054 jobs found' and a 'Sort: Newest' dropdown menu. The main area contains several filter categories, each with a list of options and their respective counts:

- Job Type: Any Job Type, Hourly (2,948), Fixed Price (1,106)
- Experience Level: Any Experience Level, Entry Level (267), Intermediate (2,142), Expert (1,645)
- Client History: Any Client History, No hires (1,611), 1 to 9 hires (1,415), 10+ hires (1,028)

- Project Length: Any Project Length, Less than 1 month (876), 1 to 3 months (654), 3 to 6 months (510), More than 6 months (908)

At the bottom, there are two search boxes: 'Category' and 'Talent Clouds', both with magnifying glass icons. A 'Close Filters' button is located at the bottom left.

Once you have filtered to your settings, you can click "Save this Search to your Job Feed" then name the search. Ex: Google Ads High Ticket Clients.

You can also save specific jobs as a favorite to apply to later. This is done by clicking the heart, which will add it to your "Saved Jobs".

Qualifying Jobs

Once you have your desired search settings, the next step is to scan the job postings and determine which to send proposals to.

I usually will start with the most recent posted jobs that are relevant to me because this is one of the most important factors to getting a response. SPEED IS CRUCIAL!

Once you have exhausted all the recent job postings, you can then move to a search for your specific skill and browse job postings from earlier in the week that are still open. However, keep in mind that when you bid for older jobs you may be competing with 20-50 freelancers.

During your search, make sure you are reviewing jobs that are appropriate for your experience level set on your profile settings.

Your ultimate goal is to go for expert-level jobs. However, if you are just starting I encourage you to start with intermediate-level jobs. Avoid entry-level jobs unless you want to work for peanuts.

Next, once you begin to find jobs that sound promising at first glance, take a deeper dive and look at the following metrics to determine if it's a good client for you.

- Payment method verification
- Reviews
- Client location
- Hire rate
- Total spend
- Avg. hourly rate

Job Search Best Practices

Keep your Upwork feed open throughout the day, press refresh and send off targeted proposals in real-time. Massive actions give you big results. Go after the brand new jobs just posted.

It's amazing how many people post jobs on the platform. If you can get to them right after they posted the job they will be the most excited about it. So the sooner you can get to them and show them you are a great fit, the quicker you can close the deal.

When searching for jobs you can also see the number of proposals and number of people being interviewed for the job. Take this into consideration before applying if there are a high number of proposals sent and multiple freelancers already being interviewed. It's not worth your time.

I highly suggest a premium Upwork account where you can see the bid range for each job and position yourself accordingly. Price yourself at the high end, but not over priced,

Pay attention to when the job post has been last viewed by the client. You can see if they are paying close attention to the job or if they haven't checked in days.

Lastly, when you are being aggressive and are ready to close some deals, check Upwork 10 times per day and apply to 5-10 jobs that are good fit for you and your position.
