Tutorial Summary

This tutorial is a current look at how we work with children with autism and their families. Covering current research in social communication development and her own research, Dr Grace Thompson discusses ecologically oriented theory and the evolution of music therapy work with children with autism. Providing a practical component Grace discusses program planning, assessment, and collaborating and supporting parents and other therapists to build their capacity to work with the child. As part of the tutorial Grace shares her new 'Music in Everyday life' assessment, developed in conjunction with Dr Tali Gottfried. Grace has also included a book chapter review from her book 'Music therapy with families', an article review and accompanying workbook which you may be able to use for additional CMTE/CPD credits.
